Monologue – the medieval traffic warden

You have outstanding fines, sir!

Two counts of parking a horse and cart outside your father's shop for loading and unloading...

One count of parking your horse outside your sister's hut.

Four counts of not eating your sprouts, three counts of turning gold into lead, five counts of parking your bow and arrows beside the bar while you buy flagons of beer,...

Ah, three counts of leaning your bow and arrows against a tree as well, yes, we must not forget that, plus of course, the parking of the aforementioned flagons of beer on the bar –

You have racked up at least five offences of that, possibly ten, and then of course you were parked by the bar also, at the wrong angle. For health and safety reasons of course.

You were stood facing to the left while you drank, when it is well known that you should have been facing to the right. Fines are triple for breaches of health and safety.

Also in breach of health and safety, your horse placed one hoof over the parking line, on several occasions, thus proving that it is a badly trained animal....

That will be... that will be..... Eight, two, five, ummmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmm.... One Million groats.
